Many of us miss the joys that might be ours by keeping our eyes fixed on those of other people. No one can enjoy his own opportunities for happiness while he is envious of another's. We lose a great deal of the joy of living by not cheerfully accepting the small pleasures that come to us every day.

The M. O. G. Road.

A Few More Chapters, of a Very Interesting Story.

CHAPTER 15. Before another issue of the News reaches our readers the election will have been held, and we hope every one who has the best interests of the town at heart will go to the polls and vote early, and then get out and hustle the slow fellows in. The building of the road is going to be a big thing for Baxter Springs. It is going to cause a lot of money to be spent here, it will fill up whatever property may be vacant now, it will increase property values in the very nature of things, because the more taxable property a town has, the more valuable property is, and we feel sure it will cause a demand for real estate. A two-railroad town is always better than a one-railroad town.

That the bonds will carry there is no doubt in the minds of anyone; in fact, we have not heard any man say he was against the proposition. Fellows whom you talk with say we must have the road. The railroad matter has the boards, and it should have.

Let every fellow do his duty and make the vote as nearly unanimous as possible. And after the election is over, and the bonds have carried, let every fellow do his full duty in helping out the committee which will have in hand the matter of getting the right of way. It will not be exactly fair to let two or three men do all the work. Every man up in the collar; all together.

T. J. Morrow has sold his property on River street. Or rather he has traded it for a fine residence property in Santa Fe place, a swell residence section of Kansas City.

The gas man is not happy these days. The weather does not suit him. Perhaps your fuel bill will be less per month from now on. And of course you hope so.

A Difference

Anybody can read a bank statement, but not every one can tell just what it means. Everybody can read the statement "This Bank's Deposits Are Guaranteed Under the State Guaranty Law," and tell just what that means. It means that the State Guaranty Fund stands behind every dollar deposited in this bank, positively asserting that the depositor will be paid in full. That's the difference between bank statements. One requires an expert to tell what it means. The other anybody can understand.
